We have a NEW home in Lyttelton!

Over the past twelve months we have been working with Lyttelton Primary School and the Ministry of Education on developing the new Lyttelton Primary School hall into a dual purpose hall & theatre facility. We are excited and thankful for the opportunity that Lyttelton School & the MoE have given us, and have signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the MoE that will essentially provide a venue that is school hall by day/theatre and performing arts education by night and weekends.

Our original intention post quakes was to continue our occupancy at the Workingmens Club Lyttelton Inc premises at 16 Canterbury St, and indeed worked with the Club on designs and funding support. But the lease terms that WMC eventually offered were unworkable from the The Loons' point of view. The Loons sought mediation but WMC would not change its offer so The Loons will not now be leasing 16 Canterbury Street. We do wish the WMC well in rebuilding the Theatre that the WMC received funding for, to deliver the outstanding arts and community facility at 16 Canterbury Street The Loons envisaged in the planning.

At our new venue, which we will call LAF (the Lyttelton Arts Factory)

Our goal is to create a place of performance and performing arts education with a view to extending that education across all sectors of the art community. So who knows - you might be attending an art class or writing workshop sometime in the next 18 months!

It will be fitted out with retractable seating for 130 which will allow the space to quickly and easily transform from hall/empty box to tiered theatre seating for both school and Loons use. A full lighting and sound rig will be installed to make sure those moments of magic will transfer from the old venue to the new.

The future site of LAF, home of The Loons. The 18 metre x 12 metre hall/theatre space will be situated right on the corner of Oxford Street and Sumner Road in Lyttelton. And as the Lyttelton Festival of Lights wraps up I thought what better time to catch a pic than a clear, calm mid-winter night with houses lit up behind.

The LAF - Lyttelton Arts Factory foundations on site are well underway. Next time you're passing check out the progress for yourselves!

At this stage the building is scheduled for completion in mid-April 2016, and from there we think it should be about another month to install seating, lighting and sound. So hopefully within twelve months we should be inviting you to a housewarming of some description - we can't wait!

In between now and then we have a whole bunch of dollars to raise (about $300,000 to be more precise) but we'll let you know in a later how you can help us with this. Of course if you have any ideas on how you could help then please let me know!

Upcoming Shows we'd love you to come to

We have some classic Loons fare for you coming up in August and September. To find out more info and make a booking go to our new website [www.theloons theatretrust.com](http://www.theloons theatretrust.com)

August 22 sees the return of another Loons Quiz, with Quizmaster Joe Bennett. We want to make this one a cracker, so tell your friends and book in nice and early. Is it a quiz? Is it a show? You decide as you & your team negotiate five rounds of questions and performances. Get a group of 4 - 6 together, and then book in once for your team - no need to book in individually per ticket, saving on booking and transaction fees for you all!

We are excited to be a part of the Christchurch Arts Festival this year, and our premier season of Trapped runs from 3 - 6 September right in the heart of the Arts Centre in Christchurch. Directed by Mike Friend, our show will transform the solo shows of Tom Trevella, Sophie Ewert and Skye Broberg into one combined performance expertly linked and woven together with dialogue from Joe Bennett. Tickets go on sale for our production from this Monday.

New ways to keep up with us

If you haven't checked out and saved our new website [www.theloons theatretrust.com](http://www.theloons theatretrust.com) into your favourites then please do so when you've got five minutes to spare. In it you'll find recent news, along with show info, upcoming performances, education classes and much much more..

We have a youtube channel where we'll post promotional video of performances, along with extra footage and interviews from behind the scenes. And if facebook is your thing, then we're here too!

The Loons on the airwaves

The Loons hit the airwaves on Sunday 14 June! Mike and Darryl talked to Lynn Freeman about the Loons of past, present and future on National Radio's Standing Room Only programme.

We are now a Charitable Trust

One of the things we've been working away at in the background is to make sure that we have the right organisational structure behind us so that Mike and Darryl and the team can keep doing what they do. We determined that fully utilizing our charitable trust that we'd established a few years back was the best way forward.

So while you'll still see much of the same at the 'coalface' we've got a great team in behind supporting and ensuring that we stay focused on those things that The Loons does best - education, professional performance & community events. Joe Bennett chairs our team of trustees : harbour basin locals Helen Sellwood, Brent Stanaway and Annie Horgan. And our fundraiser Kate Anastasiou is working away at securing us our much needed dollars for the new venue fitout.

Thanks for reading, and thanks for your support. See you at our next event,

Darryl, The Loons

Restaurant of the Year! Roots is Amazing

This time last year Roots Restaurant won its first Cuisine NZ Good Food Hat. A year later and owners Giulio Sturla and Christy Martin are now celebrating their achievement "New Zealand Restaurant of the Year and Innovation of the Year". Added to the titles are two hats and Lyttelton is the location of a very special little restaurant.

What a remarkable food journey. Often in life you come across exceptional people who you know are going to do something great. Giulio and Christy fit that mould. When they arrived in Lyttelton five years ago they had a great vision for food based on their knowledge of European food culture. They were not locals but originated from the America's. Not being local can be an advantage. They looked at the food possibilities around our harbour with fresh eyes and between them they were amazed at what grew locally. Foraging is a part of their daily lives and as they got to know the place and all the amazing things that grew wild here.

Giulio started creating food around the interesting ingredients they were finding. Initially these ideas were tested on friends, then the supper clubs began, the dinners in private homes, Tommy Changs and then finally their restaurant Roots opened in November 2012.

There are so many things that set the pair apart from the main stream restaurant scene. As Giulio says "We are much more than just a restaurant. We feed also the soul, mind and spirit". Together they lead a life that celebrates nature. They value the special things that come from our amazing place -the mushrooms, herbs, fruit, sea weed, special grasses and all the other little delicacies that are found here. They have spent time getting to know the natural cycle that exists here. Soil type, climate, terrain all make an impact on the food that we have in our region. They look at the totality of the food package. From the soil to the producers to the climate, it's much bigger picture thinking than simply cooking the food and serving customers. You could say they take a holistic view of the food cycle.

Roots has been brave and developed a restaurant style that most diners will not be familiar with. "We only have a degustation menu", said Christy. That means there is no menu to choose from nor even to see until the end of the evening. Food is sourced and the menu created daily. "If you have a food allergy or dietary requirement that's no problem, just let us know at the time of the booking and we design your menu around that" Christy said. Interestingly recipes also don't rate high on their culinary list. Its cooking techniques and food combinations that drive the style of the food they produce. They are experimenting daily.

This restaurant is all about an entire lifestyle. The owners are extremely close to the producers, the local surroundings and the local people. It's not just about serving diners. "It's about doing things well and honestly" says Giulio. "It's about being true to yourself"

Focusing on money has been a very small part of the restaurant. This restaurant was built by the love and support of the community. People stepped up to help fit the restaurant out and make the garden. People paid for dinner tickets in advance so the couple could build up a small amount of capital. They certainly do not fit the regular business model and they should be an inspiration to many young people that if you have a dream and a vision you can do it by hard work and the support of a village in this case.

These attributes must have shone through to the Cuisine Judges. Giulio had no idea who the judges were or when they visited. "The first we knew we had won something was the week before the official winners were announced. We were asked to do some promotional material. Next thing we knew we'd won two awards, Restaurant of the Year and Innovation of the Year".

Congratulations to everyone involved with Roots. What an amazing food journey.

Urumau Reserve Blasting and Access Issues Clarified

The Sumner Road re-opening project had quite a few locals including the Lyttelton Reserves Management Committee worried about adverse outcomes from the project proposals. The Resource Consent application submitted for comment indicated that Urumau Reserve would be closed for long periods of time, explosives would be stored on the ridge line, security fencing would stop local access for recreational users and so the list of negative outcomes went on.

On Monday June 15th the Lyttelton Reserves Management Committee had its bi-monthly meeting. Matt Engle from the City Council was able to update the committee on the actual plans proposed. He stated, “ the original consent paperwork looked at the worse case scenarios. We didn’t have experts on the ground looking at what would actually be done. We have now had a series of site visits and the work is going to be a much smaller scale event than envisaged in the consenting paperwork”.

“Magazine A as detailed in the project specifications will not be built” he said. This will be good news to local residents. The scale of the works proposed is quite minimal so the container to store the explosives will not be needed. He also indicated there were no plans to add gravel to the existing four wheel drive track. “The impact on the reserve is going to be very minimal. I envisage only six days of blasting and all of that will be on the other side of the ridge” he said. The feared heavy traffic movements on our small streets will not eventuate. Explosives will be taken on site in small quantities daily for the small amount of work required.

Whilst the reserve will be closed for the few hours that blasting will occur, the long closures residents had feared will not eventuate. This is great news for the recreational users of the Reserve. Outcomes for our natural environment are good as well. Matt explained that the rocks are going to be shattered by the explosives. There will not be rock roll or damaging outcomes to the landscape. This is great news for the Reserve. This approach will ensure the biodiversity gains from community efforts over many years will not be lost.

Between the Piles

The newsletter of the Dampier Bay Mooring Association
Volume 1 April 2015

Welcome to this the first edition of our association's newsletter. We hope you will find it informative and useful. It is our intention to publish "Between the Piles" randomly throughout the year whenever matters come to hand which we believe may be of value to our members and others who have an interest in the pile moorings at Dampier Bay. "Between the Piles" is available by email to anyone who requests it and hard copy is also available by post on request.

The Fate of the Pile Moorings

The plan for port recovery is now being led by Environment Canterbury (ECAN) who have received from LPC their plan and now have formed the "Preliminary Draft Lyttelton Port Recovery Plan" On 14 and 16 April ECAN held meetings prior to inviting formal submissions including the reclamation and repair of the port and development at Dampier Bay. Several of our association members attended and spoke at each of these meetings. Unfortunately while being presented as a consultation, in fact what really happened was that the audience were treated to a slick presentation which simply showed what ECAN, LPC and CCC intend. There was no consultation. Only clarification questions were permitted with a standard answer being "Put it in your submission". In short the ECAN plan will allow the LPC to proceed to remove the pile moorings and build a floating marina as a permitted activity. That means they will not need a consent and there would be no public hearing. THIS MUST NOT HAPPEN. It should be a discretionary activity to allow for proper consultation. The association has indicated that it supports a new floating marina to accommodate the desire for more safe moorings but not in place of all the existing pile moorings – in addition to them. The pile moorings are a heritage feature of some 90 years and would form a focus for a heritage precinct in what the LPC calls "preserving our past". ECAN needs to consider its community responsibility to protect existing berth holders, many of who are of modest means (the ordinary wage earner) with older boats and have been long term tenants. Keeping a couple of rows of pile moorings for the smaller boats would do this.

So while we left the meetings rather disappointed we did receive some help on making a submission and may have opened a door for further discussions with ECAN and LPC.

A History and Controversy

The pile moorings at Dampier Bay have been the subject of much discussion and debate over many years. What many people may not know is the long historical saga that lead to their being established or the subsequent events that have taken place over the ninety odd years since the piles were first driven into the sticky mud of the harbour bottom. At that time the pilings cost twenty-seven pounds fifteen shillings each and mooring fees were set at twenty shillings a year for small boats and thirty shillings for larger boats. How times have changed!

At that time the very responsible members of the Lyttelton Harbour Board were emphatic about insisting that the area of Dampier Bay should be set aside for the recreation and enjoyment of the local people with some emphasis on yachting and so a facility would be created to aid in the training of young people as future sailors.

In the next edition of Between the Piles we will continue the story of the first settlers and how Dampier Bay came to be what it is today. In later editions of our newsletter we will tell of the plans afoot for the Bay area and the likely consequences of some such plans.

The Fate of the Pile Moorings

All 270 submissions to ECAN are now in and can be found on the ECAN web site. <http://ecan.govt.nz/our-responsibilities/regional-plans/lpr-plan/Pages/subs.aspx>. That is a lot of reading and there are many points of view presented. Now we move to the hearing stage 2 to 12 June. Here are a couple of interesting submissions: The Lyttelton Harbour Issues Group argue that the 27 hectares proposed reclamation is being asked for by the port at no cost. This could then be sold to private interests and thus the public have effectively given away 27 hectares. In return rather than giving public access to the land at Dampier Bay and establishing a marina for profit for LPC maybe they should be gifting this land and water to the public domain as compensation. That seems fair. Val McClimont submitted that there are legal reasons why the Port Company should not be enabled to build and manage a floating dock marina in Dampier Bay. Judge J A Smith's decision in Jan. 2001 denied exclusive use of that water-space. Their only interest in Dampier Bay is by virtue of their deemed consent to own piles there from which to operate a mooring business leasing those piles.

The official line that our association is taking is that we are supporting a marina development as there is a need for safe berths. However we have not supported any particular body owning the space or doing the development. We are strongly in support of a mix of some pile moorings and new floating berths. And we know that this model will still achieve the goal of about 200 berths in the designated area. It is a myth that floating marinas will fit more berths into the same area. The bottom line is that we want 2 double rows of pile moorings to remain at the western end for reasons of social equity (looking after long term berth holders who are on a limited budget), heritage (the vista of the pile moorings are a significant heritage feature and focus of a heritage precinct along with some other features) and environmental issues (tug wash, overspray and dust from dry dock are not so critical for older boats on pile mooring).

Ron Dards and Graham Batchelor meet with LPC's Development Manager, John O'Dea and Jarad Pettersson (Tonkin and Taylor) recently to discuss issues and present our plans and submission. Our mixed berth model is still open for consideration despite the LPC plan not mentioning it as no detailed plan has yet been done. We offered our help with planning and were assured that we would be consulted with further developments.

A History and Controversy

(summaried from manuscript written by Val McClimont)

In our last edition we began a brief synopsis of the past history of the pilings. Now to continue.

Actually the story begins on 30 August 1849 when Lyttelton was first gazetted as an official port of entry into New Zealand. The geography of the region is interesting. Lyttelton is actually a caldera, an ancient volcanic crater filled with fine mud, sticky, blue greasy mud laying deeply between steep rocky cliffs. This mud is a major complication for any underwater construction. Pile driving finds no solid bottom, hard fill simply vanishes into the mud.

By 1848 Lyttelton was a busy place. Very many ships were constantly arriving bringing settlers and whalers. Cargoes were moving in and out and the harbour flourished. Then on 10 December 1848 a small sailing vessel, the Fly, three days out of Wellington under the command of Captain Thomas and carrying two surveyors, Mr. Cass and Mr. Torless, arrived off Purau. Their mission was very simple but it had far reaching effect. They were charged to locate a site for the port which was to be the launching site for the future province of Canterbury. After six weeks of exploration they decided upon what is now Christchurch and the supporting port of Lyttelton. So the saga began. In 1853 the port's first harbour master, Capt John Parsons was appointed and took up residence in a large house on the terrace above Dampier Bay. At that time the Bay was shallow with a sandy foreshore and early paintings show small craft careening there.

In 1879 reclamation work commenced and in 1877 the Harbour Board succeeded the Provincial Government as administrators of the port. In 1879 they approved the reclamation of about five acres of seabed to facilitate the establishment of a railway line to support the graving dock and the western breakwater. Although there was considerable debate about the placement of wharves at that time Dampier Bay was largely left out of the discussions because there is a solid volcanic reef under the mud there and dredging would not produce any useful depth of water. So Dampier Bay was given over to swing moorings with small craft scattered over the area which is now occupied by the pilings,

The Listener

Brenda Walker
Diamond Harbour Writers Group

One rainy afternoon she asked herself what it meant 'to listen'? to really, really listen? and came to the conclusion that one could listen to any number of things or people yet in the end it was what one heard that could be a game changer.

Outside the window rain continued steadily pattering down. Although she could detect tweeting in the shrubs, the birds had not arrived on their afternoon foraging rounds. Today there would be plenty of worms around driven out of their holes by the soaking. Snails also would be having a feast on the exposed roots and fallen cellulose of grass stalks, to say nothing of newly planted spinach and lettuce.

The solid cloud cover convinced her that there would be no break any time soon in the weather so she put on her rainwear and stepped out. Nobody around on this somber afternoon, not even dog-walkers, that's unusual she thought, not a soul in sight, just me, the gulls and the rain. Glancing towards the coast, she saw the ferry making its way across the harbour and marvelled once more at the fact that all the water she could see came from above, all the clouds living in the mountains poured it down the rivers which gave it to the sea. Utter magic.

As she walked along it hit her again, what a gift water truly is. Every drop of it has a history, every molecule a mystery. Perhaps its been part of a waterfall, or dripped from alpine forest branches, lived in a flowing river or rushed over rocks in a mountain stream. Maybe its hung over the countryside in the form of mist or sparkled like diamonds in the morning dew. These raindrops which now gently brushed her face were on a journey which affected every aspect of living, a pure miracle of life without which nothing could exist.

Turning the final corner for home, she felt convicted of the unthinking ways she often discarded water, without valuing its true worth and in that moment of truth listening, what she heard was life's voice.

Latest Book Review

Living in a warmer world: how a changing climate will affect our lives 2013 Jim Salinger (ed)

This book is a compilation of articles by scientists in several countries, each specialising in their own professional area. Some deal with issues which have less relevance to us in NZ, but they explain in great detail the causes of the aspect, its effects, and usually various ways to adapt to the conditions and even mitigate them. It's not simply a book telling us we must reduce our damage to the climate – it tells us how we can live in, and deal with the changing climate now and in the future.

It covers such topics as: Biodiversity; Rising sea levels and our coastal society; Glaciers and climate; Water resources; Food, including wheat, grasslands, viticulture and wine, livestock, marine fisheries; Health, including heatwaves, and infectious diseases; and the ways in which decisions are made and should be made. Some are New Zealand writers, but all provide information relevant to NZ. I skipped through a lot of the technical material to the end of each chapter (as I don't have time to read the whole book) where I usually found advice on what can and must be done now to live in this changing world.

I believe every Member of Parliament should read this book, and every local body member too. Anybody involved in the rebuild of Christchurch would gain from it.

Beca Heritage Week

This is just a quick reminder for all those community groups that wish to submit an application for Beca Heritage Week you must do so by Tuesday, 30th June. If you have any questions about your application please contact the 360 Degree Events team on 03 943 2237 or email karen@360de.co.nz.

Lyttelton Community Garden

Our wonderful Lyttelton Community garden has been within the Community for the last 16 years growing community, growing knowledge and growing food and being a part of many people's lives.

We are now looking at developing plans for the gardens to ensure that our Community Garden continues to meet the needs of its community now and into the future. As part of that process we would like to ask a few questions around what you might like to see happening within your community garden and hope that you might be able to spend just a few minutes completing this short survey.

Review Creators

Lyttelton Harbour Review is a 100% voluntary community newsletter initiative developed after the February 2011 earthquake. It's a Lyttelton Harbour Information Centre initiative produced by Chairperson Wendy Everingham and Committee Member Jenny-Lee Love.

The objective of the Lyttelton Harbour Review is to help keep local residents informed with what is going on in the wider Lyttelton Harbour community. Of course the success of the Lyttelton Harbour Review could not be possible without the ongoing support and enthusiasm from the wider community. A big thank you goes out to everyone who sends information; is willing to be interviewed or lets us know what might be happening in the neighbourhood. The Lyttelton Harbour Review project would not be possible without you all.

What's News at the Lyttelton Farmers Market?

Welcome to Mount Grey Cheese

Beautiful and full-flavoured cheeses have arrived at the market. Our latest addition to the farmers market is Mount Grey Cheese, and they sold out of stock on their first day!

They have brie and camembert, blue cheese, two varieties of washed rind cheese and a very tasty looking Yorkshire style cheese named "Mrs French."

All cheeses are available to taste before you buy. They are made in Rangiora.

Waste Matters stall at the market

A Waste Matters stall will be launched at the Matariki Market this weekend. The Waste Matters stall will sell products that enable people to reduce their use of food packaging (such as reusable cloth produce bags, reusable market bags, sandwich wraps, coffee cups, bokashi bins, the Hungry Bins worm farm). The stall will be run alternately by Helen Rupp and Annie Bermingham.

Hungry Bin Worm Farms

The Hungry Bin worms have been working hard at the market: 6kg of castings were recently collected from the bin for the community garden. If you have any vegetable or fruit scraps (no citrus or onion please) left over during the market please feel free to feed the worms. The Hungry Bins can be ordered through PL (and delivered direct from Hungry Bins) and for every 10 we sell we will receive a Hungry Bin for use at the market.

Coffee Cup Library

Most of us want to do our best for the environment and the little things can make a difference. As the Waste Matters coordinator, Sarah Pritchett sorts out the waste from the Lyttelton Farmers Market every week. She also takes biodegradable packaging and food waste up to the Lyttelton Community Garden's worm farm. While sorting out the waste each Tuesday Sarah noticed that the majority of it is disposable coffee cups. So Sarah and the Waste Matters Advisory Group came up with the "Coffee Cup library". On Saturdays during the market the cups are stationed at UpShot Coffee's market stall in an old beer crate. There is an "empties" crate for used cups to be returned to. So now you can enjoy your takeaway coffee guilt-free from a real coffee cup. And someone else does the dishes.
