Lyttelton Harbour Review is a 100% voluntary community newsletter initiative developed after the February 2011 earthquake. It's a Lyttelton Harbour Information Centre initiative produced by former Chairperson Wendy Everingham and Committee Member Jenny-Lee Love.

The objective of the Lyttelton Harbour Review is to help keep local residents informed with what is going on in the wider Lyttelton Harbour community. Of course the success of the Lyttelton Harbour Review could not be possible without the ongoing support and enthusiasm from the wider community.

A big thank you goes out to everyone who sends information; is willing to be interviewed or lets us know what might be happening in the neighbourhood. The Lyttelton Harbour Review project would not be possible without you all.

If you have an event, topic, sport announcement, fundraiser or cause that you would like to share with the harbour community, then Wendy or Jenny-Lee would love to hear from you:

Christmas Tree of Hope 2018

Celebrating 5 years within the "Community wish" to advise a change in format for this year.

As it has always been a wish for Santa's Elves Teresa, Flo, Michaela and Emmy to be involved in a Community Lunch.

Tree of Hope will join Community House, Christmas Lunch, funded by Cressy Trust on Tuesday 18th December 2018 and Lyttelton Youth Group Christmas Break Up Party Friday 14th December 2018.

Wishing you all a Happy, Safe and Prosperous New Year 2019.

Christmas Message Community Board Chair

Coming into the holiday season, we would like to encourage our community to get involved in their own patch of paradise by rolling up their sleeves and getting some jobs done, or even joining a local community group.

Our volunteer groups are involved in some tremendous activities. A great example is the work of the Wainui ratepayers, who have just completed a planting exercise around Wainui Stream, and the efforts in Urumau Reserve in planting natives and maintaining walking and mountain bike tracks. We also want to remind property owners that they are responsible for maintaining areas outside their front fence, such as trimming branches over footpaths or mowing lawns.

While you are enjoying the beautiful weather, please remember that we are entering the restricted fire season. Any fire, including lighting fire crackers, can quickly become a bushfire.

To find out whether you can light a bonfire, go to www.checkitsalright.nz for up-to-date details.

It is also important to know your rapid number (Rural Address Property Identification) or street number, and ensure it is displayed in a prominent place. While you are gathered around the dinner table with your family, take the time to create an action plan in the event of an emergency.

We are expecting a dry summer, so it is up to all of us to look after our water supply. Areas on the Christchurch unchlorinated water supply may need chlorination if the demand exceeds the current unchlorinated well head supply.

At this stage, there are no water restrictions in Akaroa.

For updates, check the Akaroa Sign or call 0800 800 169.

Our beach water quality is frequently checked to ensure these areas are safe for swimmers. To view the latest water quality results, visit www.lawa.org.nz/explore-data/swimming/.

If you like to take your dog to the beach, you can find maps of leashed and prohibited dog control areas, such as those in Okains Bay and Akaroa here

During this festive season, we are looking forward to spreading Christmas cheer to our neighbours, friends, and family.

We are also well-prepared for the issues to come before us in the New Year. If you want to follow our Board's activities, catch up with a Board member, or follow the issues raised at our meetings, you can read our agenda or watch the live-streaming full Council meeting .

We hope you enjoy a summer walk along the beach or the Head to Head Walkway through the bush, or even to the top of the hill.

We wish the local staff and wider team, and all of our community the very warmest season's greetings and a Happy New Year. Drive safely, and we look forward to catching up next year.

Irreligious Lyttelton Gets a New Vicar

Our town holds the title of the most irreligious place in the country according to the last census.

A tough challenge for the Revd John McLister who was recently appointed as the new Anglican priest of the Parish of Lyttelton. The Lyttelton Review sat down with John to find out why he took on the job.

We've talked before, so I know you are originally from Lyttelton.

Yes. we came out from Scotland when I was four. My dad was a wharfie. I went to primary school here and to Hagley High like most local kids.

What was it like growing up in Lyttelton?

In the 60s and 70s it was a real working class town. A lot of this working class culture has rubbed off on me – solidarity in working for human rights; community over the individual; and a certain suspicions of those in authority.

Why did you decided to take up the position of vicar of the most Irreligious town in NZ?

To be honest, it was not because I thought I would make a difference to Lyttelton's secular inclinations. I was just being selfish, and thinking, "Great coffee shops, great views, and the chance to come home, so why not".

So you plan to live in the vicarage?

Yes, eventually, once it is restored. Also, we would really like to see the grounds of the Church become a contemplative space, where people can find a quite spot to relax and reflect in.

Do you have any other plans for the site?

St Saviours at Holy Trinity really is a beautiful building, but we don't want it to be just a museum piece. It would be great to see it used by the wider Lyttelton community. This week, we will open the doors of the church for a Christmas carol sing-along, something we've not had in a Lyttelton church since the quakes. We are also changing the Sunday service times to 4pm in the afternoon. The reality is for a lot of folk, Sunday morning is no longer the best time for church.

The church has been an important part of the fabric of the Lyttelton community. Many locals have been christened and married here, and a number have had there funeral services here too.

Even in a secular society, many still wish these transitional moment in life to be handled with dignity and care. People may not be churchgoers but that does not mean they are not spiritual.

You are also involved in advocacy work for foreign seafarers.

John: Yes, I am also the chairperson of our local Seafarers Centre. Lyttelton is a port town, with about 10,000 foreign seafarers visiting annual. Irreligious or not, Lyttelton has always been a place of welcome and care for seafarers. That's something church and town can agree on.

A Door Closes, Another Opens

Sophie Returns

"We had been living on the West Coast for ten years and planned to open an Organic Shop in Hokitika. The deal fell through and so we decided to return to our roots in Christchurch" said Sophie Hartnell.

Sophie and partner Hamish Fairbairn moved back to Christchurch almost two years ago after living away for many years. They came with no jobs and unsure what the future here would look like. "We aren't daunted by new things and certainly don't mind giving new things a try", she said. Within a short time of moving back from the coast they settled on Lyttelton as the place to live, got a house and waited to see what would unfold.

The work then started to fall into place. Last April Sophie was appointed a part time volunteer coordinator for the Banks Peninsula Conservation Trust and then Hamish got a similar role with Conservation Volunteers NZ. For the first year or so Sophie said it had been a little difficult to connect in Lyttelton but that changed at the beginning of this year when she spoke to Lillie Star, a former manager of Harbour Co-op. Lillie was stepping down and was looking for new people to take her role. The outcome of that was Sophie was one of three people appointed to part time roles at Harbour Co-op.

"That was the break I needed to start to connect with Lyttelton people. "Since that appointment I'm meeting locals and feeling at home", she said. Her passion for organic food is met with this role.

"At the Co-op, I'm mostly looking after promotions. I write the newsletter and think up ways to get more people engaged with the shop. One of the key things that I need to get out there is that the shop isn't expensive. If you buy in bulk and seasonal Harbour Co-op is really affordable".

The role at the Co-op is two days a week. The remainder of the time she's focusing on her Banks Peninsula Conservation Trust work. The Banks Peninsula Conservation Trust is a well-known name around the place but until quite recently there were very few projects around Lyttelton Harbour. Most of the work was looking after the covenants on Peninsula farms. "BPCT has 67 registered covenants covering 1343 hectares on Banks Peninsula," Sophie said. Generally the covenants are held on private land and are areas that farmers have decided to return to native bush.

"Quite a bit of my work is focused on a restoration project in Lyttelton". The Port Saddle Project above Urumau Reserve is on land owned by the Lyttelton Port Company. BPCT have entered into an arrangement with the Port Company to restore this site. "This land is now covenanted in perpetuity so it will always be an environmental reserve", she said. Sophie's role in this project is to coordinate volunteers and contractors to carry out the master plan for the site. Currently that involves a series of native plantings and the maintenance work associated with that.

Further afield she's organising weed removal in the Birdlings Flat area but technically she can be called on to help any of the covenanted land holders within the Peninsula. The BPCT operates right across the entire Peninsula from the city side of the Port Hills to the southernmost tip at Akaroa Scenic Reserve near the opening to Akaroa harbour.

Her role as volunteer coordinator seems to link well with connections to schools and organisations who want to give people the opportunity to help out for the environment. "We have some key helpers who come from Lyttelton but for the most I'm working with church, business or school groups who are keen to support the environment".

Sophie enjoys the flexibility and challenges of trying new things. Originally arts trained she has ventured into a wide range of activities over the years. She likes the challenge of constantly learning and she's enjoying discovering her new place, Lyttelton. "One of the best things for me is how dog friendly Lyttelton is". She's out in the hills each day enjoying the nature and great walks right on our doorstep.

Lyttelton's Seafarers Centre A Glimpse of a Seaman's Life

Benji Sator is a seafarer from the Philippines. He arrives in Lyttelton every 6 weeks on a container ship. The first thing Benji wants to do when he arrives in port is call his wife Maria. He knows she and the kids will be at home at dinnertime, about 9pm NZ time. So, upon arrival, if our Centre is not open, he will head up to the library and stand in freezing wind and tell his wife he is fine and his daughter that he loves her, as his hands turn blue from the cold.

While in port, Benji likes to stock up on few personal items. There is no bank in Lyttelton, but local businesses will happily exchange the US dollars he is paid for NZ dollars at a rate of US$1 for every NZ$1. Everyone knows there is usually at least 30-35% difference in the exchange rate in favour of the NZ dollar. For every US$100 he breaks, Beni is $40 out of pocket on the exchange rate alone. That is $40 dollars loss for a man who earns in a month what some CEOs of port companies earn in an hour. Last month, he wanted to go to the city, so called a taxi. The taxi driver charged him US$100 for a lift into town That is 10% of what Benji earns in a month. A fare to town should cost about NZ$45 dollars.

The Lyttelton Seafarers Centre is a place set up for Benji and his fellow workers. To provide assistance, amenities, care, support and most importantly a brief homelike respite.

While it still only opens for three hours each evening, in the 3 years since, we have had over 10,000 visits from seafarers docking in Lyttelton. Five nights a week, a volunteer opens the Centre, switches on the heat pump, and gives an inquiring seafarer our password so they can access our free wi-fi. During those hours, they don't need to stand out in the dark and freezing cold anymore. The most common sound you hear in the Centre these nights is not the voices of the seamen, but the voices of their wives and children talking from overseas and laughing and chatting on Skype to a husband, a parent, a sibling.

The volunteers who work at the centre recognise seafarers, the poorly paid and often exploited international workforce who leave home and families to transport goods by ship to our shores. These are a group of people we often ignore, sometimes don't even see. A seafarer can be endangered from shipwreck, piracy, dangerous work, industrial accidents and exploitation by employment agents, officers and shipping companies. Safety and fair wages are worldwide issues.

International Ports are a highly profitable industry. In 2017, NZ ports made a total post-tax profit of $260 million, paying millions of dollars in dividends to the City Councils that own them. Possibly this is because our ports are well managed? But more probably, it is because shipping companies are charged huge fees to tie up at NZ wharves, fees they can afford to pay, because they use cheap labour - from the Philippines, India, China, South Korea and other countries to crew their ships.

Every year, thousands of poorly paid seafarers come to our shores on merchant ships to bring goods and much needed materials that help make the infrastructure of New Zealand better for all of us. Yet we provide them little hospitality when they disembark from their boats. This is unlike passengers who come on cruise ships and spend millions of dollars in our shops. They get the red carpet laid out before them, for their comfort and wellbeing. We have a different standard for the workers, the seafarers. Most ports have virtually nothing to offer by way of hospitality. A seafarers' centre, run on a volunteer basis with huge time and financial constraints, may or may not be located in port. If one is, maybe it is open for only a few hours, while a vessel could be in port for up to a week.

New Zealand is a signatory to the Maritime Labour Convention, an International Labour Organisation (ILO) Treaty signed in 2006. It covers almost every aspect of seafarer life and work on board ship, including the provision of shore-based welfare facilities for seafarers when in port. The Convention came into force in New Zealand in March 2017. Among many other provisions, the Convention recommends that members should take measures to ensure that 'adequate welfare facilities and services are provided for seafarers in designated ports of call.' However, it makes no mandatory designation as to who should fund such services, instead recommending they come 'from grants from public funds, or levies or other special dues from shipping.'

At this point, none of this is happening in NZ. Instead, voluntary groupings like the Apostleship of the Sea (AoS) and the Mission to Seafarers (MtS) are having sausage sizzles, dance nights and raffles to raise funding to try and keep centres open for seafarers when they call. Secondary students volunteer their evenings to help with money transfers, purchases of food items, organise internet access for seafarers and strum the occasional guitar. Let's be clear. It is long past time for City Councils, who own the ports and make millions of dollars from them annually, to step up and put some solid regular finance towards providing seafarers safe, hospitable and just conditions on shore. After all, port companies made a total post-tax profit of $260 million in 2017. Also, there is absolutely no reason why a small levy (eg $50 – 100) shouldn't be charged from every ship that comes into port to help towards funding such a resource. This dollar amount collected would be peanuts compared to the more than $20 000 ship owners can pay to tie up dockside for a 24-hour stay.

This is an issue primarily about the decent treatment of seafarers. It's a human rights issue. A matter of justice - and hospitality.

In the meantime it's up to us to help where we can, 'Light House' is one small show with its shoulder to the wheel that we ask you to join us in the pushing!

Carols returning to Lyttelton Church

Interrupted by the earthquakes and the destruction of the town's historic churches, a Lyttelton tradition for over 150 years is to be revived.

After a seven year absence, carol singing in the church is to return to Lyttelton this Christmas season. "We haven't had a carol service in a church here since the earthquakes," says the Revd John McLister the new Anglican vicar in Lyttelton. In the 2011 earthquake, three of Lyttelton's historic churches were destroyed, putting an end to the long standing custom. "Before the quakes, all the local churches had carol services. The midnight Christmas service was a bit of a Lyttelton institution."

Now with the opening of the beautifully restored St Saviour's at Holy Trinity, the church will again welcome the local community to the annual carols in the Church. "It will be lovely to see this tradition return to Lyttelton, there is something magical about singing carols in a church surrounded by stained-glass windows and with candles burning."

HairPort Lounge A Lyttel Institution

Megan Jamieson started her local hair salon business in 2015. It had always been her dream to work and live locally. The first incarnation of this business was the combination of two businesses, HairPort Lounge, her salon and HairPort Barber.

"Coming into 2019, the existing barber is moving out of Lyttelton so leaves an exciting opportunity for a like minded professional to join the Hairport lounge team," said Megan. The salon remains open as normal; it will just have a change of direction.

"Salons run quite differently now" " said Megan. She explained that to make businesses more affordable often hairdressers share a lease and so a series of small businesses operate under the same roof. In this model hairdressers have a couple of chairs each. The chairs can even be sub-let to others! That's how HairPort Lounge operates. The barbers departure means an opportunity opens for someone else to have a chair(s) at the salon.

If you are keen to join this team, Megan is open to any suggestions. Hipster Barber, new stylist, beautician "The most important thing to me is keeping things local", she said. If you have a passion for this industry and you want to work in Lyttelton Megan is keen to hear from you.

Meantime Megan and Monika look forward to seeing you over summer when you pop into get your new style, colour or trim. They also wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

TEV Maori

Prior to the introduction of TEV Maori the Rangatira and Hinemoa had operated on the Wellington/Lyttelton Steamer Express Service. However, by 1951 the Rangatira was 25 years old and in line with the progressive policy of the Union Company a replacement ship was being considered. In April 1951 it was announced that an order had been placed with Vickers Armstrong for another turbo-electric steamer which would be larger than either the Hinemoa or Rangatira. Something a little over 8,000 tons was planned.

The new ship was to be called Maori, thus reviving the name of one of the foundation steamers of 174 tons and also that of the first steamer specially designed for the service. The new vessel was expected to have accommodation for 966 passengers and in addition to general cargo would be able to carry 72 motor vehicles. The launching date was set for 27 December 1952 with the ceremony to be performed by H.R.H. Princess Margaret, the Sister of Her Majesty the Queen.

The first trials of the Maori were disappointing as she was well below her design speed. This was corrected by a change in propeller pitch. She departed Newcastle-on-Tyne on 11 October 1953 bound for Wellington New Zealand, via Curacao, Panama and Tahiti. On arrival in Wellington on 15 December 1953, the Dominion Newspaper reported that her interior fittings gave the illusion of a luxury yacht.

Launching of TEV Maori

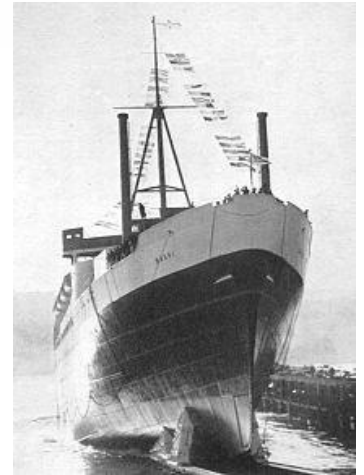

Her measurements were 425 feet long with a beam of 63 feet making her 25 ft longer than the Hinemoa and 5 ft wider. She had two de-luxe cabins, six two berth cabins with showers and toilets attached, three one berth cabins with showers and toilets attached, thirty-nine ordinary one berth cabins, two hundred and thirty-five two berth cabins, thirty-one three berth cabins, seventy-five four berth cabins and four twelve berth cabins

Engine Room Controls onboard TEV Maori

On 27 December 1953 she made her maiden voyage to Lyttelton.

In April 1965 she was withdrawn from service and converted to a roll-on, roll-off vessel at the Taikoo Dockyard, Hong Kong. At the time this was the largest conversion attempted. The greater part of the main deck (Deck D) and the aft end of the lower deck (Deck E) became a two level garage complete with lashing points capable of holding 100 vehicles. In order to allow head room the after end of the upper deck (Deck C) was also stripped of cabins reducing passenger accommodation by 160. A stern door was manufactured in Japan and a lateral thrust unit was fitted near the bow to assist with maneuvering the vessel alongside.

TEV Maori after conversion to RO-RO

During 1966 she made 153 visits to Lyttelton with 459,000 tons of cargo.

After the Wahine disaster in April 1968 the Maori was forced to carry out the work of two ships, a task that frequently involved travelling from Wellington to Lyttelton and back in the same day. At times when there was a greater number of cars than the Maori could carry the Kawatiri, an old collier which had been laid up for years, was brought back into service to transport the excess vehicles.

Her last sailing on the inter-island steamer express service took place on 27 March 1972. At this time the new Rangatira entered the service. However, the Maori was brought back into service temporarily in September 1972 when the Rangatira suffered engine problems.

The people in New Zealand had such fond memories of the Maori that all kinds of ideas were discussed in order to keep her. At one stage it was suggested that she should be used as a floating hotel at the Christchurch Commonwealth Games, turned into a trade fair venue and even a power generating plant. At one stage the evangelical group, Youth with a Mission, put a deposit on her, but they could not raise the buying price. What a wonderful floating hotel and tourist attraction it would have made berthed on one of the old wharves in Lyttelton at the present time.

In the end she was sold to the Yung Tai Steel and Iron Company of Kaohsiung, Taiwan, in 1974 and broken up at Kaohsiung.

The Christchurch City Council is now selling season memberships for the Norman Kirk Memorial Pool, which can be purchased by calling their contact centre (open 24/7) on 941 8999. The swimming season is underway on November 17.

The price this season has increased slightly to $160 per household, and there will be a replacement fee of $50 in case they are lost. After payment the CCC swim team will once again ask that each key holder attends an on-site induction to give our team a chance to remind you of the all-important health and safety stuff after which we will reactivate your key.

A date for the diary: this summer's pool party is January 13.

If you have any queries please contact Rowan Foley 03 941 6901 or Rowan.Foley@ccc.govt.nz

LPC - Marine piling for cruise berth about to begin

With marine piling on the cruise berth project starting soon, we have finalised our Marine Mammal Management Plan (MMMP). This plan sets out how Lyttelton Port Company and the contractor involved will manage potential noise effects on marine mammals, particularly Hector's Dolphins.

The plan is a result of a collaboration with some of New Zealand's leading marine mammal scientists, marine acousticians and underwater noise modelling specialists.

We've also been fortunate to have input from the Department of Conservation on the plan. Their review and advice has been greatly

Farewell Hannah

Lyttelton Community House clients, volunteers and board are sad to announce Hannah will be leaving her role at LCH from the 18th December. Hannah has been a fantastic advocate for LCH and the work we do. Her energy and enthusiasm for community and social work will be missed however we all wish her well for her future endeavours.

LCH will appoint a new person to the role in the coming weeks and we will introduce this person in due course. In the meantime, rest assured LCH continues to move from strength to strength. We had a difficult stretch and funding constraints in 2016/17 which pushed us to rethink our staffing levels in order to stay open. Fortunately, those days are behind us and we have continued to operate effectively with little disruption to services.

We continue to provide a drop-in service where people come and enjoy meals, cups of tea and social interaction.

In the last two years we have noticed a jump in the need to support people with their housing difficulties so if you know someone who needs support in this area let us know and we may be able to be of service and are practiced now in the processes.

Our daily meal service continues. Meals are delivered three times a week covering five days' worth of meals. These meals are cooked in our commercial kitchen and delivered by volunteers. We'd like to take this opportunity to thank our volunteers, some of whom have been delivering since the project began post-quake.

The commercial kitchen is a boon for LCH and please know we offer catering services for gatherings. We can provide morning and afternoon teas, light meals and food for most occasions. All proceeds from these catering services helps keep LCH a functioning provider of social services in the township and wider harbour basin.

Once again, we wish Hannah all the best for her future.

Sumner Road and St Davids Street retaining wall re-facing

From Wednesday 12 December 2018 for about six months, we will be re-facing the Summer Road and St Davids Street retaining walls with red-rock stone.

Work will be carried out between 7:00am and 6:00pm.

Traffic Impacts:

From Wednesday 12 December for four weeks, a temporary lane closure will be in place on St Davids Street, between houses 6 to 17. There will be no access to Sumner Road from this intersection at St Davids Street.

A priority give way will also be in place during this time on Sumner Road, between houses 51 to 53. No parking cones will be set up the weekend prior to ensure vehicles are kept away from our work area.

Lane closure during December

Key:

Work area  No entry

From the beginning of January for four and half months, we will have a lane closure in place on St Davids Street, from Sumner Road intersection to 53 St Davids Street. A no entry will therefore be in place east on St Davids Street at this intersection. Traffic will be detoured via Reserve Terrace and Sumner Road.

No parking will be allowed along this section of road during this time.

Lane closure from early January for four months

Please note:

Access to residents' properties will be maintained at all times. We may need to restrict access to other parts of the road next year to continue work. We will keep you updated of any

Key:

Work area  No entry

Additional info:

During the Canterbury Earthquakes, a number of red rock retaining walls were damaged beyond repair and were generally replaced with reinforced concrete ones.

The objective of this project is to reface the Sumner Road and St Davids Street retaining walls with original red rock, to restore some historic context.

Thank you for your patience and understanding as we carry out this work.

General Information:

Please contact Fulton Hogan on 0800 762 334 if you have any specific access requirements e.g. nurse/doctor visits, Meals on Wheels or planned works on your property.

There will be increased noise, dust and vibration levels.

All works are subject to favourable weather and on-site construction conditions.

Your rubbish and recycling will not change. Please put your bins in their normal spot by 5:00pm the night before collection and our crew will move and return them if needed.

Safety is our number one priority - safety is your responsibility too. Stay clear and stay alert. Please keep children and pets at a safe distance from the work site.

For more information on this work, please feel free to get in touch. We are happy to help.
